Hello Amy:

We just wanted to voice our continued support for the formation of a historic preservation commission.

I continue to be stunned that anyone is against such a great idea as I've seen it be so successful in towns such as Indianapolis of course.

As you are aware, they're continues to be a tremendous amount of miscommunication and lack of education on what this topic actually surrounds and what is potentially trying to be accomplished.

I drove through the town of Franklin, Indiana just the other day and realized what Zionsville could be... as they have done literally an amazing job to keep the absolute beauty of their historic downtown and it sounds like their town is truly revitalized. Their historic archetecture is breathtaking!

Thank you!
